CALGARY • WEEKEND, JUNE 4-6, 2010 metronews.ca

Unleashing on June 8.

Grizzlies made threatened species in Alta.

WILDLIFE The Alberta government threw a life-line Thursday to its dangerously dwindling population of grizzly bears.

Mel Knight, minister of sustainable resource development, announced the bears would now be classified as a threatened species.

The move kickstarts further protection measures, including the politically tricky one of limiting access to bear habitat by hunters, industry workers and ATV riders.

It's estimated there are about 700 grizzlies in Alberta, most in the federal and provincial parks.

- Watch an interview with the Berringtons' grandson, James Graham, at metronews.ca.

Allen and Margaret Berrington were inseparable during their nearly seven decades of marriage and will remain together even after death, according to their grandson.

"It's a love story 69 years in the making," said James Graham.

"Their relationship? Inseparable, symbiotic and to that end I think we're going to combine their ashes so that they can remain together in that state."

The Berringtons, who were both in their 90s, were found dead Wednesday on a secluded road nearly 100 kilometres outside of the city, said RCMP Sgt. Patrick Webb.

It's believed that the couple ran out of gas on a wagon trail in the wooded area and began walking to seek help. Their bodies were found only metres apart from one another about three kilometres south of their Chrysler Sebring.

"I don't know what their choices were, but I think the key is that whatever choice they had made in that moment, they did make it together," said Graham.

He said his grandparents may have been heading to the Grey Eagle Casino on May 27 for the seafood buffet when they missed the turnoff.

The family found the home in slight disarray, and Graham said it was unlike his grandmother to leave the house in that state.

"My grandfather had been losing weight at such a rate that (Margaret) would have been quite concerned about getting him fed and (the buffet) would have been one of their fastest options," explained Graham.

Allen had been suffering from early onset dementia, which could have caused him to become confused when he was driving, said Graham.

While the couple did own a cellphone, Graham said the device is still sitting on their coffee table, uncharged.

They leave behind three children, seven grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

"We have heavy hearts and our spirits are embattled, but there also has been a very warm embrace from the community," said Graham.

MacLean helps save man from possible suicide bid

PHILADELPHIA Hockey Night in Canada fixture Ron MacLean was part of a heroic river rescue in the City of Brotherly Love on Thursday.

MacLean was having lunch on a patio by the Delaware River with Don Cherry when a woman came in and said, "Help, help there's someone in the water."

"There was four or five of us around," said MacLean.

He said he jumped over a wrought-iron railing they have around the patio and went down to the river.

"I think the husband or boyfriend ... of the woman" had already jumped into the river to assist, MacLean added.

"He had already stripped down and was just in his underwear and jumped into the water and pulled the man over onto a raft," MacLean said.

The man had apparently been trying to take his own life.

"His throat was all wrapped up in sort-of clear packaging tape and he had rope around him," he said.

MacLean said he and a couple of hotel staff helped pull the man from the raft onto the wharf.

He said the man appeared grateful for being saved.

Engineers post their strategy for BP oil spill online

KATIE TURNER
for Metro Calgary

Two Calgary engineers believe they may have found the solution to the massive BP oil spill.

Mechanical engineers Thomas Kuelker and Brian Varney set up a miniature version of the Gulf spill in Kuelker's backyard.

The two filmed their experiment, posted it on YouTube and sent their ideas to BP.

"We did the experiment, proved it and decided that we'll broadcast it so that people can see that it does work," said Kuelker.

Their concept is based on the premise that oil rises in water, said Kuelker. The video shows cooking oil being piped through a tube, captured by a funnel and pumped upwards through nine-foot hose.

"A bench test, which is what that is, what we just did is the first step in proving that something can work," said Kuelker.

Added Varney: "Our intention was to get some attention here, so what we were requesting from BP is that they get a peer review of the technology from other engineers."

While BP sent them a response in early May telling them they would be contacted within 24 hours, the two have not heard anything since.

Mom of injured five-year-old charged with attempted murder

INJURIES Police have charged a local mother with attempted murder in connection with her five-year-old son's injuries stemming from an incident last week.

On May 27, police were called to the Alberta Children's Hospital for reports the child was in medical distress.

The victim arrived at hospital with his mother and was experiencing difficulties breathing and was struggling to stand up, police said in a release.

Officials said the symptoms appeared to be more consistent with trauma than an illness. The Child Abuse Unit immediately took over the case to mental health concerns and the child's mother was taken into custody, police said.

The 32-year-old woman was officially charged on June 1 with attempted murder, choking with intent and failing to provide the necessities of life.

Police didn't release any other details because the case is before a court and her name will not be released to protect the identity of her child.

CRIME Calgary police continue to make a dent in the city's downtown drug trade after Operation Iris netted 17 arrests, police announced Thursday.

The operation focused mainly in the downtown core, Insp. Kevan Stuart said, but officials were led to various areas of the city including Bridgeland and Motel Village.

"I think it's making a difference but it's not something we can just walk away from. We have to keep on it," Stuart said of the drug operations.

"Ultimately, this is organized crime. Drugs are an organized crime and this is the street level end of it."

While police laid charges against 17 people, 17 more suspects remain at large, and Stuart says police continue to search for them.

Eight of the suspects arrested were involved and charged in previous drug stings.

Calgarians to drop drawers for cancer

Underwear Affair looks to raise cash, awareness

JESSICA PICHE
for Metro Calgary

Watch out for a group of streakers on Calgary streets this weekend.

The fourth annual Underwear Affair Run and Walk will see Calgarians of all ages, shapes and sizes stripping down to their skivvies to raise funds for cancers below the belt.

Cancers below the waist are often considered taboo according to event organizers. The Underwear Affair allows people to feel comfortable talking about the importance of education around these cancers.

The popular race sees participants dressed in costumes ranging from footie pajamas to near-scandalous underwear sets. Anything goes, as long as it's legal.

For Johnathon MacDonald, 29, of The Budgie Smugglers team, the event is personal. A testicular cancer survivor, he knows the importance of cancer awareness.

"A lot of guys don't know you can get this at such a young age," he said. "I was lucky. It's a lot worse for other people."

Proceeds from the event go towards the Tom Baker Cancer Centre as well as 15 other cancer centres in the province. Last year, 1,244 participants raised $850,000 for cancers below the belt.

Jon McDonald and his teammates are all stripped down and geared up for this weekend's Underwear Affair cancer research fundraiser.

Burrows eyeing better transit around airport

KATIE TURNER

CAMPAIGN Mayoral candidate Craig Burrows released his first major infrastructure plan yesterday, calling for better transportation routes around the airport.

Craig Burrows

Burrows said that construction of an airport tunnel underneath a proposed runway connecting north-east communities to the airport is a necessity because as of April 2011, Barlow Trail will be closed from 48th Avenue NE to Airport Trail.

"We need to build a tunnel today that will accommodate all transportation," he said.

Burrows said that construction of the tunnel should not be put off by the city and should be built at the same time as the runway.

"It needs to be done, so I say let's get it done right the first time," said Burrows.

Rework public safety: Alderman

COUNCIL Calgary's approach to public safety needs reworking, according to Ald. Bob Hawkesworth, who wants council to think about better co-ordinating the groups involved.

"We should start thinking about safety in its fullest form. We need to be thinking about safety across the whole spectrum," Hawkesworth said.

He is asking city council to direct administration to look at creating an administrative body incorporating all groups involved with public safety, such as health services and provincial institutions.

TRIAL The trial of an Alberta mother accused of killing her two sons has been adjourned until July 29, after the case was put over again in Wetaskiwin. Alberta Hospital doctors in Edmonton said they need more time to assess her condition to determine if she's mentally fit to stand trial and were given a further 60-day assessment.

CEMETERY Beginning this June and running through October, the City of Calgary is inviting Calgarians to participate in free, guided walking tours of the city's historic Union Cemetery, Burnsland Cemetery, and

St. Mary's Pioneer Cemetery. Registration is not required. Most of Calgary's colourful characters lay buried in Calgary's oldest existing civic burial grounds. The first walks begin this Sunday at Union Cemetery from 2 to 3:30 p.m.

Calgarians will have to let their fingers do the clicking instead of walking after Yellow Pages Group announced residential phone books are now available by request only.

Calgary joins other major Canadian cities Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, Edmonton, Quebec City and Ottawa-Gatineau, according to spokesperson Perry Schwartz.

"People are increasingly turning to online and mobile to find their numbers and we want listings to be available to all users in the format of their choice," Schwartz said.

Yellow Pages Group said they will print five million fewer phone books each year, which equals 3,500 metric tonnes of paper.

Green Calgary applauds the decision, executive director Geoff Braun said.

"That's a significant amount of paper and energy that will be saved."

That's how a stern Prime Minister Stephen Harper dismissed thoughts of a coalition governing Canada as it now does in Britain.

"Winners are the ones who form government," said Harper, standing in a sun-drenched garden at 10 Downing Street where he visited newly minted British Prime Minister David Cameron.

Harper is still smarting from the failed attempt by the Liberals and New Democrats with support by the Bloc Québécois to form a coalition in 2008.

Harper, on whistlestops

Rummaging for library funds

UrbanCompass

metronews.ca/paskey

No, you can't have my purple leather jacket. It cost $20 at Value Village.

When I tell you that, you offer me $30.

Sorry. No to you and all the others who have tried.

I like it. I triumphantly grabbed it before the dreaded "pickers."

They are the folks who select the best stuff and offer it at vintage shops at a greater markup.

It's part of the Value Village cycle of stuff life.

Value Village is a chain that collects clothing from not-for-profits, weighs them, and cuts a cheque.

I have another worthy candidate: The Calgary Public Library. It needs another income source.

The CPL is in a pickle, so to speak. The central downtown branch is falling apart. It's either repair it for $53 million or rebuild it for $200 million.

The city finances about 80 per cent of the library budget. Extra money it received from the province's Municipal Sustainability Initiative went to suburban branches, especially those attached to recreational facilities.

A new central library is up there in popularity with the airport tunnel. Everyone thinks it's a good idea. No one wants to commit the cash.

Readers of this column know I am a dedicated fan of the Calgary Public Library. Like you, I tend to use my local branch.

So why finance a downtown library?

The central branch houses Calgary's history collection, archives, central offices and a theatre with many free speakers and other events.

In the words of library board chair Jamie Niessen, the central library is the "heart and hub of the library system."

City living is about priorities. I think our library has fantastic collections and service.

The fact Calgary went through one of the biggest economic booms the world has ever seen and didn't get commitment for a new downtown library is truly lousy.

City council is now being asked to make a decision: Renovate or build anew.

We have the money for roads, bridges: How about more for our leading cultural institutions, which opens its doors to all Calgarians, enriches our minds and imaginations?

Do we need a Value Village collective effort to raise money for our public library?

If it comes to this, I'll donate my purple leather jacket. But I'd rather city council recognize our CPL Cinderella and make the library high priority.

'Don't forget about the people of Chad'

Mia Farrow

I have been to Chad 13 times. What brings me back is the warmth and resilience of the people despite living in one of the world's poorest and conflict torn countries.

My most recent trip to Chad was in March with UNICEF, where I visited Mao, a sand-swept town in the Kanem region in the far west of the country. It is the most desolate and powerfully beautiful place I have ever seen.

But the rainfall last year was barely one-third of what it once was. With drought came the failure of the crops. The food stocks are gone. But the real horror is that the children of Mao are at risk of dying, too.

Approximately two million people in Chad are in need of food aid — but support is falling short. Last month, the UN Food and Agriculture Organization

(FAO) sounded the alarm, saying that of the $11.8 million requested for agricultural emergency operations in the country, only $2 million has been mobilized. That compares with the $14.5 million FAO has raised for neighbouring Niger, also hit by severe food shortages.

"Donors are afraid of a repetition of the 2005 food crisis in Niger, when many people starved to death," Fatouma Seid, FAO's emergency operations expert, said in a statement. "In comparison, there's less awareness of what's happening in Chad, although the situation there is just as critical."

The government of Chad and the international community must urgently respond to this crisis. The same message I hear from men, women and children who I meet when travelling through this African country, is the same message I urge the world to hear: "Don't forget about the people of Chad."

Good news for news

Good news for the news business: Companies are paying newspapers and magazines up to five times as much to place ads in their iPad applications as what similar advertising costs on regular web sites.

This doesn't mean Apple's tablet computer will live up to its hype as a saviour to the media industry. Online ads still generate a small fraction of news companies' advertising revenue, and it's an open question whether print ads will return to what they totalled before the recession.

But early evidence suggests the iPad is at least offering publishers a way to get more money out of ad-

New possibilities

• iPad applications such as USA Today's give advertisers new possibilities. A reader can click on Courtyard by Marriott's USA Today ad and then with a flick of a finger scroll through images of the hotel's updated lobby design.

vertisers. That bolsters the hope that portable touchscreen computers could start turning the economics of digital advertising in publishers' favour.

Still, a lot will need to go right for publishers before the iPad and imitator tablet computers become a significant source of income.

For one thing, media applications will have to be compelling enough to keep people engaged for longer periods. That's especially true if a publisher wants to charge for a news app, because free articles on the web are just a few taps away on the iPad's browser. Expect media companies to hold back more material from their free web sites and offer it exclusively in tablet apps.

Also, tablet computers will have to get into many more readers' hands — but without becoming so mundane that advertisers are no longer willing to pay a premium. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

China's new tax meant to raise money for poor areas

NATURAL RESOURCES China has imposed a tax on oil and gas production in its northwestern Muslim region of Xinjiang in a move to raise money for poor minority areas.

The five per cent tax in oil-rich Xinjiang, imposed Tuesday, is part of a development plan for the desert region, where ethnic tensions exploded into rioting last July that killed nearly 200 people. Beijing says that after a trial there, the tax will be applied nationwide.

Minority areas such as Xinjiang and Tibet are among China's poorest despite producing a large share of its oil, gas and minerals.

Canadian radio stations' revenues down: CRTC

BROADCASTING Canada's federal regulator says commercial radio stations generally produced lower revenues and profits in 2009, though French-language FM stations bucked the trend.

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission said yesterday that overall profits tumbled to $272 million from $334.9 million in 2008.

At English FM radio, profits were $234.1 million, a drop from $299.9 million in the previous year.

But French FM radio's profits to $35.4 million from $33.3 million.

Revenues fell 5.2 per cent to $1.5 billion in the year ended Aug. 31, 2009.

English-language FM radio revenues were down 5.8 per cent to just less than $1 billion, while French-language FM radio reported slightly higher revenues of $227 million. AM station revenues were down 7.4 per cent to just more than $300 million.

Stations classified as "ethnic" reported revenues that dropped 1.1 per cent to $38.8 million.

Armed sheriffs pulled from meetings

The Alberta government has done an abrupt about-face and has pulled armed sheriffs from a contentious regulatory hearing for a proposed bitumen upgrader northeast of Fort Saskatchewan.

The Solicitor General's Department had said the sheriffs were brought in to ensure everyone involved felt safe in sharing their views. But the armed presence, along with plainclothes security officers who were seen filming people entering the building, led opponents of the development to accuse the Energy Resources Conservation Board of resorting to extreme tactics.

Resident Anne Brown says she asked the security guards why they were filming people and was told they would be giving

"If anyone felt intimidated by the presence of sheriffs, I apologize ... They're there to keep the peace and to ensure that everybody ... has an opportunity for input."

the tape to their employer.

A spokeswoman for the French company Total, which wants to build the upgrader, says the company did not know videotaping was taking place.

Elizabeth Cordeau-Chatelien says the security officials hired by the company were not given permission to film protesters.

"We have not seen it," she said. "We have no use for it. And we've asked that the footage be destroyed and we've had confirmation that it has been destroyed."

As for the armed sheriffs, solicitor general Frank

Oberle said Thursday they were no longer necessary because the hearings have been peaceful.

"If anyone there felt intimidated by the presence of sheriffs, I apologize," said Oberle. "The fact of the matter is they're there to keep the peace and to ensure that everybody that attends one of these meetings has an opportunity for input."

Bump in traffic for Calgary's WestJet

PASSENGERS Both of Canada's biggest airlines flew fuller planes in May as passenger traffic increased.

WestJet Airlines Ltd. said its passenger traffic increased by 19 per cent over May 2009 and it carried 125,000 more people than a year ago.

The Calgary-based airline increased its traffic as it grew capacity by 13.4 per cent, mainly by adding service to sun destinations in the United States, Mexico and the Caribbean. The airline's load factor — a measure of how full its fleet was — rose 3.6 percentage points to 77.7 per cent.

"Considering our double-digit increase in capacity, which all went into our southern markets, we are very pleased with our May traffic results," said WestJet president and CEO Gregg Saretsky.

He also said domestic demand was "solid."

Meanwhile, Air Canada said passenger traffic increased by 9.7 per cent as the airline upped its capacity by 6.4 per cent. On a consolidated basis with regional carrier Jazz, the airline's load factor rose 2.5 percentage points to 82 per cent in May.

"Led by a nearly 30 per cent increase in the Pacific, traffic grew faster than capacity in every segment, resulting in higher load factors in all markets," said Air Canada president and CEO Calin Rovinescu.

No plan to calm perfect storm

Baseball official says call that denied pitcher perfection won't be reversed

The imperfect game stands.

An umpire's tears and admission he blew a call failed to move baseball commissioner Bud Selig to award Armando Galarraga the perfect game he pitched. The play and its aftermath quickly became the talk of the sports world and beyond, even to the White House.

Selig said Thursday that Major League Baseball will look at expanded replay and umpiring, but didn't specifically address umpire Jim Joyce's botched call Wednesday night that cost Galarraga the perfect game — 27 batters up, 27 batters down. No hits, no walks, no errors.

A baseball official familiar with the decision confirmed to The Associated Press that the call was not being reversed. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because that element was not included in Selig's statement.

Joyce said he erred on what would've been the final out in Detroit, when he called Cleveland's Jason Donald safe at first base. The umpire personally apologized to Galarraga and hugged him after the Tigers' 3-0 win, then took the field at Comerica Park Thursday in tears.

Tigers manager Jim Leyland picked Galarraga to present Detroit's lineup at home plate before Thursday's game to set up the meeting with Joyce. They shook hands, and the umpire gave the pitcher a pat on the shoulder.

"I didn't want this to be my 15 minutes of fame. I would have liked my 15 minutes to be a great call in the World Series. Hopefully, my 15 minutes are over now," Joyce said.

Home plate umpire Jim Joyce shakes hands with Detroit Tigers pitcher Armando Galarraga Thursday in Detroit.

Joyce, a longtime ump with a solid reputation, declined comment on MLB's statement after Thursday's game, saying he hadn't read it.

The White House

- First the umpire blew the call. Now, in the view of the White House, so did Major League Baseball.
- Presidential spokesman Robert Gibbs said "I hope that baseball awards a perfect game to that pitcher."
- Gibbs said he had not talked to President Barack Obama about the matter.

"There's no doubt he feels bad and terrible," Galarraga said after Detroit beat Cleveland 12-6 on Thursday. "I have a lot of respect for the man. It takes a lot to say you're sorry and to say in interviews he made a mistake." "I'm sad, but I know that I pitched a perfect game. The first 28-out perfect game," he said.

Kobe pots 30 as Lakers take opener

(L.A. Lakers lead series 1-0)

Celtics 89 Lakers 102

NBA FINALS So the Celtics want to play rough again? Kobe Bryant and the Lakers look ready this time around, and they barged into an early lead in the NBA finals.

Bryant scored 30 points, Pau Gasol had 23 points and 14 rebounds, and defending champion Los Angeles got tough in a 102-89 victory over Boston in the NBA finals opener Thursday night.

Ron Artest scored 15 points after tumbling to the ground in a tangle with Paul Pierce in the opening minute of the 12th finals meeting in the NBA's most scintillating rivalry.

Bryant and Gasol then led a gritty physical effort against the Celtics, who memorably pushed around the Lakers while winning their 2008 finals matchup in six games.

Pierce scored 24 points and Kevin Garnett added 16 after a slow start for the Celtics.

Game 2 is Sunday night at Staples Center.

Not the usual suspects

Unexpected players producing goals in final

The big guns for both the Flyers and the Blackhawks have been relatively quiet in the Stanley Cup final, but goals are coming from unexpected sources.

Third-line centre Claude Giroux was the hero with an overtime goal and two assists as the Flyers got their first win of the series in Game 3 on Wednesday. His goal came after Ville Leino, who was not in the lineup when the playoffs started, tied it in the third period.

While they were shut out in Game 3, Chicago's second unit of Patrick Sharp with Marian Hossa and Troy Brouwer was its most dangerous in the opening two games.

Chicago stars Patrick Kane and Jonathan Toews finally combined for their first goal of the series in Game 3 and hope that will get them untracked, but it has been tough sledding against the big, physical Philadelphia defence led by Chris Pronger.

"They're so tightly checked, everyone is, but maybe those top guys a little more," Blackhawks forward Kris Versteeg said Thursday. "So it's not surprising."

Philadelphia Flyer Claude Giroux, top right, celebrates after scoring in overtime on Wednesday in Philadelphia.

"Both teams have depth in scoring and you're seeing that in the series."

Chicago leads the best-of-seven final 2-1 with Game 4 of what has been a tight series set for Friday night at the Wachovia Center.

Philadelphia's first line of Mike Richards, Jeff Carter and Simon Gagne has combined for three points — a Gagne goal with an assist to the other two.

Into that void stepped the second unit of centre Daniel Briere with Leino and rugged winger Scott Hartnell, who between them have six goals and seven assists in the series.

Henderson's jersey more than just a hockey sweater

Canadian Tire Corporation is trying to repatriate one of the most significant artifacts in the history of Canada.

It's a hockey sweater. Then again, it's not just any sweater. It's the jersey Paul Henderson was

FieldofPlay

Scott Russell

metronews.ca/fieldofplay

wearing when he scored the most famous goal in the annals of the game. It came with 34 seconds left in Moscow and sunk the Soviet Union in the fabled Summit Series of 1972.

We all know the story of the dramatic Canadian comeback and Henderson's heroics, which included three game-winning goals.

That scenario has been etched onto the Canadian consciousness for nearly 40 years.

Now Canadian Tire is trying to buy that sweater at an online auction and its opening bid of $200,000 already makes it the most valuable hockey sweater ever. Canadian Tire wants to release the iconic fabric from the grip of an American, who now owns it, and make it available for all Canadians to see.

Here's the kicker

— once the company is done with it, having exhausted its promotional value, it plans to put the garment on long-term loan to a museum, presumably the Hockey Hall of Fame.

The Canadian government, through the Ministry of Heritage, has hinted it may aid in the process if it looks like internationals are winning the bidding.

Sounds like a plan.

Ironically, Paul Henderson, the man who wore the sweater and was somehow magically empowered by it, is not a member of the Hockey Hall of Fame.

He is a member of Canada's Sports Hall of Fame and is the honorary chair of the Mississauga Sports Hall of Fame, where he presided over inductions this week.

Strange because the man he scored that goal against, Vladislav Tretiak, is enshrined in hockey's greatest museum.

So why isn't Henderson?

Critics will argue that he didn't win a Stanley Cup and didn't score enough goals in his career in the National Hockey League.

But it isn't called the "NHL Hall of Fame," it's the "Hockey Hall of Fame" and Henderson's name is synonymous with hockey's most famous act.

He scored the goal, not the sweater.

Surely we no longer believe that clothes make the man.

Maybe it's time to not only bring this famous hockey sweater home, but also to recognize that the player who wore it is the real national treasure.

Laugh-fest with heart

Get Him to the Greek

Director: Nick Stoller
Stars: Russell Brand, Jonah Hill

STEVE GOW
 for Metro Canada

Just as comedy sage Judd Apatow made stars out of unlikely actors Seth Rogen and Jason Segel with respective hits, Get Him to the Greek aims to turn Russell Brand and plummy Jonah Hill into Hollywood's latest A-listers.

And it may just do it. A spin-off to the 2008 Apatow-produced hit Forgetting Sarah Marshall, this tale about a record executive hopeful named Aaron (Hill) and his lascivious, out-of-control rock 'n' roll charge (Brand, reviving Marshall's Aldous Snow character) anchors gross-out gags by giving the bedlam a heart.

When eager Aaron is given a big corporate opportunity to escort the relapsing rocker to America for a comeback concert at Hollywood's Greek Theatre, the young exec is dragged into Snow's late-night binges, spontaneous side-trips and the type of rabid partying that may recall lost memories from last summer's surprise hit The Hangover.

Like that film, Greek is a juxtapositional experience allowing audiences a peek behind the curtain at, not only the hedonism of the rock 'n' roll lifestyle (especially while in Vegas), but the emptiness that often accompanies it.

Showing some interesting dramatic depth, Brand's Snow remains charming enough even while he slips Aaron a potent medicinal cocktail or badgers him to shove a ball of contraband someplace it really shouldn't go.

As the film wears on, we soon realize there's motive to the mayhem. Surprisingly however, the real scene-stealer is Sean "P. Diddy" Coombs, who plays the maniacal CEO who sends Aaron on his mission.

Whenever he appears (and it is too infrequent), the proceedings amp up to 11. Toss in several obscure cameo appearances (Ricky Schroeder) and you may just want to get yourself to the Greek.

Brainy monster mash

Splice

Director: Vincenzo Natali
Stars: Sarah Polley, Adrien Brody
Classification: 18A
Rating: ●●●●●

CHRIS ALEXANDER
 for Metro Canada

Drawing obvious thematic and stylistic comparisons to the work of Canadian body horror icon David Cronenberg, fellow Canuck Vincenzo (Cube, Cypher) Natali's Splice is a triumph of psychosexual science fiction.

Like the best of Cronenberg (Videodrome, The Brood, Shivers), the film manages to explore high-minded concepts of mad science and technology run amok while grounding them in warm, earthy — some might say uniquely Canadian — humanity.

But despite its highbrow pretensions, Splice is also filled to the beaker with buckets of pulp trash mayhem: genre fans looking to wallow in blood-spattered camp will be more than a bit thrilled.

Adrien Brody and Sarah Polley play lover geneticists who, after becoming scientist rock stars from creating DNA fused life-forms, decide to blend human and animal genes for kicks and curiosity.

The resulting beastie is Adrien Brody and Canadian actress Sarah Polley play modern-day Frankensteins in Splice.

Dren, a tadpole-by-way of H.R. Giger-esque female that becomes their surrogate child and potentially career derailing secret. But as the rapidly aging Dren (played in adult form by French starlet Delphine Cheneac) grows into womanhood, many changes — most of them more lethal than hormonal — take effect and their once treasured 'daughter' becomes a sexually volatile siren from test-tube hell.

While ostensibly a creature feature (Dren's metamorphosis goes from adorable to repellent, just like many a human life-span), the greatest strength of Splice is its deft fast forwarding of the parenthood experience.

Brody and Polley are excellent, running the arc of proud mom and pop, to concerned guardians, to ultimately losing touch and fearing their offspring.

If the film has a few pacing flaws (there are perhaps one too many extended sequences of Cheneac throwing a fit), Splice is just so blazingly weird, so perverse and compelling that you should forgive it any trespasses.

With any luck, this intelligent, delightfully de-ranked monster mash will be the one that propels the incredibly talented Natali from cult hero to sci-fi saviour.

A little fun on the road

Passenger Side

Director: Matt Bissonnette
Stars: Joel Bissonnette, Adam Scott
Classification: 18A
Rating: ●●●●●

CHRIS ALEXANDER
 for Metro Canada

REVIEW Passenger Side is yet another in a long line of understated, no budget Canadian road movies that date back to Don Shebib's groundbreaking 1970 East coast tragedy Goin Down the Road.

For some reason the road flick is part of the fabric of our cinematic identity, perhaps because it doesn't cost much to pile into a car and drive across the country. And that's also why the government likes to fund them: they're patriotic and cheap.

But the difference between Passenger Side and the rest of its Northern ilk, is that this one is actually set in L.A.

Adam Scott (Step Brothers,) and Joel Bissonnette (who's brother Matt also wrote and directed) star as two Montreal-born brothers with heavy emotional baggage. When Bissonnette asks his younger sibling to chauffeur him around the city one day so he can run some errands, much clever dialogue and indie rock music ensue. But the older lad is hiding more than one secret and by the end of the trip, both brothers will have to confront their true feelings about each other and many skeletons will collapse out of their respective closets.

Well written and occasionally funny (and oddly smutty), there's a Brown Bunny-esque aimlessness to the flick that might leave some viewers sleepy. Thank heavens the acting is well above average with the terminally underrated Scott owning the screen.

"From revelatory interviews with Alex, Geddy and Neil to the rarest of rare performance footage... this is a film for fans."

— Guy Dixon, The Globe and Mail

Inspired by animation

Jeunet's whimsical Micmacs owes a lot to Toy Story

PHIL BROWN
for Metro Canada

Few filmmakers working today offer audiences a vision as unique, bizarre, and oddly touching as Jean-Pierre Jeunet.

The visually expressive director began his career as a cartoonist before transitioning into movies with works like the cult oddity Delicatessen and the whimsical award-winning Amélie.

The latest movie from the eccentric French filmmaker is Micmacs, a comedy about a band of garbage dump dwelling outsiders that is both an homage to silent film comedy and animation as well as an attack on international arms dealing. That description might make the film sound dark and strange, which it is, but like all of Jeunet's movies it's also quite sweet and hilarious.

Metro caught up with the beloved filmmaker

Jean-Pierre Jeunet's Micmacs opens next Friday.

when he brought Micmacs to TIFF 09. The film is the product of a distinctly French sensibility (even starring France's top comedic actor, Dany Boon), but surprisingly, Jeunet admitted that the movie originated out of the frustration he felt working on two failed American projects.

"After A Very Long Engagement I was offered a Harry Potter movie," revealed Jeunet. "But everything was ready. The costumes and cast were already there. All I had to do was to put down the camera and say 'go.' Life is too short for that, so I tried to do Yann Martel's Life Of Pi instead. I spent two years working on it, but after a while it became too expensive. I decided to do another film."

The screenplay was also inspired by a rather surprising source.

"My main reference on this film was Pixar movies," admitted the director. "I love their work and I had the great privilege of taking a master class with them in San Francisco. For example, the heroes in Micmacs are based on the toys from Toy Story. There are seven characters and each has their own special gift that they combine to use together."

The result is one of the best films that Jean-Pierre Jeunet has ever made, combining the gently sentimental comedy of his most recent work with the dark atmosphere of his early films.

"It wasn't easy to do, especially when we needed something at the beginning that was pretty dark to justify the revenge," said Jeunet. "But that's how I designed it. It starts very dark and then little by little it becomes a comedy. That was on purpose. It was a kind of challenge I set for myself." Fortunately for audiences, it was a challenge that clearly paid off.

Movie morsels

Prince of Persia: The Sands of Time

REVIEW If anyone should see Prince of Persia: The Sands of Time, it's the folks behind the recent Clash of the Titans remake. In it they'd find a prime example of what their effects-heavy swords-and-sandals adventure was missing: A sense of fun. In his first foray into action hero territory, Jake Gyllenhaal digs into the role of adopted Persian royal Dastan with gusto, working just as hard at his character's rakish charm as he does at the building-leaping stunt work. While the film may stumble a bit in the clumsy resolution, it's still exactly what a good summer movie should be.

Ned Ehrbar/Metro World News

Robin Hood

REVIEW The lore of Robin Hood is so ingrained in minds that trying to produce a story that essentially imagines how he became who he became is remarkably redundant. Filmmaker Ridley Scott teams up with Russell Crowe for the fifth time to reawaken this character but beyond a few flashy action sequences which may be impressive but are far from mind-blowing. Crowe and Cate Blanchett have the Oscar-winning acting chops to breathe life into this blockbuster blueprint.

Steve Gow/For Metro Canada

Sex and the City 2

REVIEW At over 140 minutes, this bloated, self-indulgent flick may fulfill a few fantasies but as a film, it's uninspired. Set two years after Carrie's (Sarah Jessica Parker) marriage in the first film, the Manhattan-based novelist becomes disillusioned by the fact Big (Chris Noth) is settling into domestic life. How fortunate then that she and the girls are invited by perpetual floozy Samantha (Kim Cattrall) on a trip to Abu Dhabi to reflect on their respective crises through cocktails, shopping and occasionally offending the locals with unwelcome acts of sexual freedom.

National storms the charts

Indie act finds success on both sides of the border

CAM LINDSAY
for Metro Canada

One week after learning his band's new album became the second and third best-selling in Canada and the U.S., respectively, drummer Bryan Devendorf is still at a loss for words.

"It's weird," he says. "We're definitely not a mainstream band that would be thought of on the same level as Justin Bieber."

As he's quick to point out, the new National album, High Violet, did slip a number of spots in its second week of release, but Devendorf and his bandmates have a lot to celebrate after more than a decade together.

The indie band's profile has seen a significant rise over the course of five critically acclaimed albums. Their last, 2007's Boxer, was unavoidable in the music press and on television, where its songs graced every show from Chuck and Gossip Girl to Barack Obama's campaign video. Despite this exposure, Devendorf still feels The National benefit most from grassroots exposure.

"It's word of mouth, but also with that encompasses the Internet, which helps," he explains. "It could also be just perseverance, we've been doing this for ten years now. It's like in politics, you hang around long enough and then you can run for President."

Like any wise politician, The National haven't changed many policies in the last decade. Meticulously co-produced with Peter Katis (Jónsi, Interpol), High Violet stays true to the Brooklyn band's dependable model of evocative and forlorn rock. Yes, they still sound depressed, a description that follows them like a bad smell.

The National has seen a significant rise in its profile over the course of five critically acclaimed albums.

"People bring their own interpretations — they might be depressed themselves or they might identify with elements," Devendorf says. "There is a lot of accuracy to that. But it's also depressive in how black humour can be depressive, it's not maudlin. It's humorously depressive."

Devendorf feels the mood and sound of the album may not sound like a big stretch from Boxer but it wasn't planned that way. "While it's still kind of orchestral and lush, the album is a little more straightforward and the core songwriting is simpler.

"We produce ourselves along with Peter Katis, so it's kind of this team that does a similar thing," he adds. "We were trying to do something different. We have this sort of tic where the songs all start smoldering into this peak and become an epic thing. I think we might just try to write songs that don't have verses and choruses. At least we say we will, but we probably actually won."

Rolling Stone rebuttal

SoundCheck

Alan Cross

metronews.ca/soundcheck

Last week, Rolling Stone trotted out another of its 500 Greatest Songs of All Time lists. The list is suspiciously similar (and for some stretches — including the top ten — completely identical) to a list issued in 2004.

If you haven't seen it yet, I'll save you the trouble. Here's the top five: 1. Like a Rolling Stone, Bob Dylan; 2. (I Can't Get No) Satisfaction/Rolling Stones (Hmm. The top two songs mention "Rolling Stone"); 3. Imagine, John Lennon; 4. What's Going On, Marvin Gaye; and 5. Respect, Aretha Franklin.

Without question, these are fine songs. But in Rolling Stone's view — a magazine mired in the '60s and '70s — no one has been able to write a better rock song since John Lennon woke up one morning and plunked out Imagine before breakfast. That was 39 years ago.

The most recent song is Nirvana's Smells Like Teen Spirit at No. 9. The rest of the list is dominated by the usual RS suspects: The Beatles, The Rolling Stones, Bob Dylan, Elvis Presley and The Beach Boys.

If I were King of the Lists, my top ten would be substantially more ecumenical. I'd include One from U2 (RS has it at No. 36), Sweet Child O' Mine by Guns 'N Roses (No. 198), Radiohead's Fake Plastic Trees (No. 385) and Killing in the Name Of/Rage Against the Machine —which inexplicably didn't even make the cut, apparently so that 99 Problems by Jay-Z and Do Ya Think I'm Sexy from Rod Stewart could.

I'd also make sure that London Calling from the Clash (RS's No. 15) and the Sex Pistols' Anarchy in the UK (No. 56) was in there, too. Zeppelin's Kashmir should surely rank higher than No. 141.

The top two songs on Rolling Stone's list of the 500 Greatest Songs of All Time mention "Rolling Stone." Bob Dylan's Like a Rolling Stone tops the list.

And my No. 1? I've long maintained the greatest rock song of all time is Won't Get Fooled Again by The Who. Timeless social/political commentary? Check. Energy quotient? Off the charts. Awesome scream? Maybe the best ever recorded. Does it still sound fresh? Absolutely. And where does Rolling Stone rank it? No. 134. Please.

'Golden Girl' McClanahan dies

Rue McClanahan, the Emmy-winning actress who brought the sexually liberated Southern belle Blanche Devereaux to life on the hit TV series The Golden Girls, has died. She was 76.

Her manager Barbara Lawrence said McClanahan died Thursday at 1 a.m. of a stroke.

She had undergone treatment for breast cancer in 1997 and later lectured to cancer support groups on "aging gracefully." In 2009, she had heart bypass surgery.

McClanahan had an active career in off-Broadway and regional stages in the 1960s before she was tapped for TV in the 1970s for the key best-friend character on the hit series Maude, starring Beatrice Arthur.

But her most loved role came in 1985 when she co-starred with Arthur, Betty White and Estelle Getty in The Golden Girls, a runaway hit that broke the sitcom mould by focusing on the foibles of four aging — and frequently eccentric — women living together in Miami. Golden Girls aimed to show "that when people mature, they add layers," she told The New York Times in 1985. "They don't turn into other creatures. The truth is we all still have our child, our adolescent, and your young woman living in us."

Rue McClanahan

McClanahan snagged an Emmy for her work on the show in 1987.

CTV to air Conan two hours later than in U.S.

TALK SHOW Canadians will be able to see Conan O'Brien's new talk show this fall — but they might have to stay up pretty late to do so.

CTV announced this morning that it will air O'Brien's new show at 1 a.m. — a full two hours after Americans will be able to watch it on TBS.

A spokesman for CTV said that the late-night program, which will debut in November, will also air on the Comedy Network but said that time slot has yet to be determined.

CTV boasted that it will feature seven Canadian prime-time shows in its lineup including Flashpoint, The Bridge, The Listener and Hiccups. Global was criticized earlier this week for a dearth of original Canadian content.

Television

The hit TV show Mad Men has inspired some people to bring back to retro styles from the 1950s and '60s.

'Retro wives' bring back classic style

The ineffable cool and razor-sharp stylings of international TV hit Mad Men reminded the world just what a classic era the 1950s and 1960s was.

But for a certain type of person this came as no surprise. They are known as 'retro wives' and they cherish the old times, the colorful houses, black and white TVs, the outlandish cars, and values most 21st-century women would see as, well, mad.

Joanne Massey (aka Lola Lamour) lives in Birmingham, north-west England, in a house that resembles a 1950s time capsule, with a black and white TV, stone fireplace, over-bright decoration and posters of old films.

"Everything modern just seems bland to me in comparison. I couldn't imagine driving anything but my Ford Anglia," she said in a blog dedicated to people known as "timewarpers."

She takes pride in being an "old-school housewife", cooking for her husband, Kevin, and keeping the house immaculate.

But Massey also holds three demanding jobs, including a successful singing career performing in wartime events across the country almost every weekend.

"When I was young, I would watch all the old stars singing in the movies and dreaming that I could be like that one day," said the timewarper.

Massey is not alone in her quest for the old days.

Carmen Johnson is a retro artist and journalist who has been following the lives of people like Massey for years. She grew up in

Joanne Massey (Lola Lamour)

Miami in the 1970s but wishes she could have lived through the 1950s.

"I feel I was born in the wrong time. I like the '70s but not as much as the '40s and the '50s, I love the elegance, the fashion and the music. But retro living is not only exterior but about old-school values. This world that we live in, everything is hectic, everything is in a rush and people stop having that communication with each other," she told Metro.

Johnson dresses vintage most of the time. Her website called timewarp-wives.blogspot.com features everything from shopping tips to home cleaning advice and ideas to find the perfect job — all in 1940s and 1950s style.

The artist says the thing people ask her the most is how retro wives live without today's technology but most believe it is possible to combine the old and the new.

"I find that most retro wives need technology. I spoke to this woman who lives like in the 1940s but she has a computer and buys her retro things on eBay. Some say they hide certain electronics because they don't combine well with the rest of the décor."

Ansari set to shine at MTV Movie Awards

Sitcom star joins a distinguished list of show's hosts

IAN JOHNSTON
for Metro Canada

The big question about this year's MTV Movie Awards isn't who is nominated but who is Aziz Ansari and why is he hosting the show?

"I am a comedian. I'm an actor. And I can also get you a good deal on a brand new KIA," explains Ansari, who is probably best known as the always-scheming Tom Haverford on TV's Parks and Recreation.

"I think they (MTV producers) were under the impression I was a Jonas Brother."

Maybe so. Though it may also have been Ansari's stand-up comedy, his work on the MTV sketch series Human Giant, and small roles in recent features like Funny People and Observe and Report that got him the gig.

Truth is, the show's raucous, anything-goes, live atmosphere is a perfect stage for a comic used to surviving on his feet.

"I'm excited to do the show. It's really a great honour," says Ansari. "When you look at the previous hosts (which include Ben Stiller, Eddie Murphy and Sarah Silverman). I mean, it's real good company to be in."

Parks and Recreation star Aziz Ansari might not be the biggest name to host the MTV Movie Awards but his background in stand-up and sketch comedy has prepared him well for the task.

Though he has yet to begin writing material,

Ansari says that because the awards are all about movies (top nominees include Avatar, The Hang- over and The Twilight Saga: New Moon), it can write itself.

"You can't ask for anything more than a movie show. It's ridiculous fodder to react to," he says.

"To prepare myself, I'm trying to get one with the audience. I've pasted a picture of (Twilight's) Robert Pattinson on my ceiling and just stare at it."

Ansari says the best bits in previous years tended to be "moments we couldn't possibly plan." Indeed, one does wonder if the actually awards — which include such new categories as Best Badass Star and Best Scared-As-S---t Performance — even matter at the end of the day.

"Wait till you see someone win the Best Global Superstar Award. They do matter," Ansari insists.

As for whether we'll get an appearance by Ansari's Parks and Rec character Tom Haverford.

"Anything can happen," says Ansari. "I think Tom would be handing out flyers to the after party at some seedy dive."

Going Out

Metro's 7th Heaven: Metro taps what's hot right now

1 Howie Mandel

TV It looks like the Canadian comedian is still at the top of his game. His show Deal Or No Deal is still going strong, and his newest gig, as a judge on America's Got Talent, is also paying off. The show, now in its fourth season, had strong ratings when it premiered this week.

2 Club Dead

BOOK The third season of True Blood premieres on HBO Canada later this month, and to mark the occasion Penguin has re-released Charlaine Harris' third novel in the Sookie Stackhouse series, Club Dead. The new season is based on the novel, which sees heroine Sookie travel to Mississippi in search of her missing vampire lover, Bill.

3 Soccer T-shirt

SPORTS A new ad from the Dutch Football Federation is causing a bit of a commotion on the Internet, and daring men to show off their chests. It features an orange T-shirt that has the face of a screaming soccer player printed on the inside. When the model in the ad pulls the front of his shirt over his head, the athlete's face covers his own. No word on whether the shirt is actually for sale.

4 Splice Yourself

INTERNET More Victor Frankenstein than Gregor Mendel, the net has a new application that allows you to "splice" a photo of yourself. The application is based on the new Sarah Polley and Adrian Brody film about scientists who splice DNA from different animals together to create a new species. It is in theatres this weekend. splicethefilm.com.

5 Donald Glover

CELEBRITY The star of the Community series might have an action movie under his belt — if his fans have their way. In the tradition of the Betty White-SNL Face-book petition, a new page has popped up urging producers to cast Glover as Spider-Man in the newest incarnation of the webslinger series.

6 The Boreal Gourmet

FOOD Canada's north is being celebrated in this new book by Michele Genest, who has creatively adapted Yukon recipes into gourmet creations. Her creations include an Elk Liver Pate, Smoked Fish Mousse, and Grilled Moose Steaks.

7 Shutter Island

DVD Martin Scorsese and Leonardo DiCaprio's latest collaboration is being released on Tuesday. The film sees DiCaprio play a U.S. marshal investigating the disappearance of a woman from a hospital for the criminally insane on Shutter Island.

(Music) girls gone wild

Latest provocative clips hitting the web are made by women

PAT HEALY
Metro World News

More than 70 million people have watched two of the world's biggest pop stars murder a restaurant full of people and slip into a sexy, synchronized dance routine amongst the dead bodies.

While Lady Gaga and Beyoncé's nine-minute treatment for the song Telephone bears the rectangular red "explicit" tag on iTunes — where it sits comfortably as the No. 2 most purchased video — it is hardly the most shocking video to come out in the past few months. But what is perhaps more shocking in question is that they were all made by women.

In Christina Aguilera's video for Not Myself Tonight, which is No. 3 on the iTunes videos chart, she plays a cussing dominatrix, who covers her scantily clad body in what appears to be liquid leather and makes both the boys and girls go gaga, basically by going Gaga.

Other recent controversial videos by women include Erykah Badu's public assassination strip tease in Window Seat and M.I.A.'s epically violent Born Free, in which the government rounds up redheads and executes them.

Marketing strategist Rachel Weingarten worked with Aguilera at the dawn of her career, and says she is disappointed by how derivative of Madonna and Lady Gaga the singer's latest is. Weingarten also says these women are being controversial only to make money in a dying music industry.

"What they're trying to do is attract the audience that's actually still buying electronics and still buying any of these things, and that's the young guy demographic, sitting in front of the computer and drooling over the video and actually spending the $2," she says.

Weingarten might be on to something: All of these videos were directed by men. However, most of the women have spoken about their extensive involvement in the projects.

Badu, who was charged with disorderly conduct late last month after stripping in the spot where JFK was shot — she pleaded not guilty — says she thinks she was misunderstood.

"It's about freeing oneself of the layers and layers of things that we have learned as Americans in this country," she told MTV News.

Steve Waksman, professor of music and American studies at Smith College, seems heartened by the trend: "The Internet is allowing video to circulate, and is opening up some different avenues for both male and female artists, but I think it's interesting women are taking more advantage of it."

Protest threats dock The Cove in Tokyo theatre

A movie theatre in Tokyo decided against showing the dolphin-hunt documentary The Cove after nationalist pressure and warnings of protests, the distributor said Thursday.

In recent months, activists have protested and screamed slogans outside the Tokyo office of the Japanese distributor, Unplugged, alleging that support for the film signals betrayal of Japanese pride.

Theater N Shibuya was scheduled to start showing the film June 26. Unplugged said the theatre changed its mind after getting deluged with angry telephone calls and being warned that screenings would be met with protests.

The American movie that won the Academy Award for documentary this year shows undercover footage of the dolphin hunt in a Japanese village and documents efforts by Ric O'Barry, a former trainer for the Flipper TV series, to stop the slaughter of dolphins for food.

Takeshi Kato of Unplugged said he remained determined to show the controversial film, and talks will continue with other theatres.

Elin wants to raise Tiger's cubs on her own: Source

STRAIGHT TO THE LION'S DEN

In the impending divorce battle between Tiger Woods and Elin Nordegren, she is reportedly planning on going after full custody of their two children, according to Radar Online. Though speculation had been that they'd agree to joint custody, that has reportedly changed. "Elin isn't saying that she's moving to Sweden but she does want full custody now," a source says. "She has changed a lot since Tiger's cheating was discovered and since he returned to golf, she's distanced herself from him. It seems to have killed the small chance they had at reconciling."

Metro Recipe of the Day

East Coast Kedgeree

INGREDIENTS:

1/2 cup long-grain white rice
500 g smoked haddock or cod fillets
2 bay leaves
4 whole black peppercorns
1 tbsp butter
1 onion, chopped
1 tsp curry powder
1/4 tsp cayenne pepper
2 hard-boiled large eggs, sieved
2 tbsp minced parsley

METHOD:

1. In medium pot, cook rice according to package directions, omitting salt.

2. Meanwhile, in large skillet, place fish in single layer. Cover with cold water. Add bay leaves and peppercorns. Bring to boil. Simmer, covered, 8 minutes or until fish flakes when tested with fork. Drain fish; discard cooking liquid and seasonings. Cool fish slightly. Remove and discard skin and bones. Use fork to flake fish. Set aside.

3. In same skillet, melt butter over moderate heat. Add onion and cook 5 minutes or until tender. Stir in curry powder and cayenne pepper. Cook, stirring 1 minute. Stir in cooked rice and half of sieved egg. Add fish; combine. Heat through, stirring constantly. To serve, sprinkle with remaining sieved egg and parsley.

ARIES

MARCH 21-APRIL 20

The more time you spend thinking about doing something the more excuses you will find to put off doing it.

TAURUS

APRIL 21-MAY 21

It is never too late to tell someone that you love them, so what are you waiting for? Like you they are looking for an opportunity to kiss and make up.

LIBRA

SEPT 23-OCT 23

You may feel that a partner or colleague is behaving unreasonably but why do they act that way? Have you given it any thought? Maybe you should.

SCORPIO

OCT 24-NOV 22

You need to let rivals and competitors know that you mean business, but not in a way that antagonizes them.

GEMINI

MAY 22-JUNE 21

If there is something you feel you have to do as a matter of duty but don't really want to make the effort then it is hardly likely to be a resounding success.

SAGITTARIUS

NOV 23-DEC 21

With so many good things going on in your life you may feel that you can do as you please. To an extent that is true but don't take too much for granted.

CANCER

JUNE 22-JULY 22

You will get the chance to go back and finish something you should have completed weeks, months, maybe even years ago. Don't wait any longer — do it.

CAPRICORN

DEC 22-JAN 20

Why do you feel that you need to escape from your current situation? It may not be perfect but it's not as bad as you seem to think it is.

LEO

JULY 23-AUG 23

There is nothing more you can do to influence a situation to do with your work or your family life. You have said your piece and now it is out of your hands.

AQUARIUS

JAN 21-FEB 18

There is no reason why you should just stand there and take the criticisms that certain people are throwing in your direction.

VIRGO

AUG 24-SEPT 22

Don't create work for yourself. You have enough on your plate as it is without adding to your responsibilities.

PISCES

FEB 19-MARCH 20

A giant burden has been lifted from your shoulders and now you feel so light that you believe you could fly!
